ORIENT adds new models to its popular vintage-inspired diver design line-up

ORIENT is launching two new models to its vintage-inspired diver design* watch models. The new models add an on-trend vintage touch to ORIENT's signature colour gradation dials. The fresh colours and striking accents add to their appeal, making them fashionable items when worn around town.

*Not an ISO standard diver's watch.

ORIENT

Diver design models are an important part of ORIENT's 70-plus year history, representing everything that is ORIENT since they were first launched in the 1960s. The new models offer casual and fashionable designs that can be worn for any occasion, with the same basic specifications as the current range, such as sapphire crystal, enhanced water resistance to 20 bar, and ORIENT's automatic movement that provides stable high accuracy and reliability.

These models feature the distinctive bi-colour rotating bezel and ORIENT's signature colour gradation dials. There are two dial colours to choose from: burgundy gradation and a limited-edition blue gradation of just 2,800 pieces. The limited edition model is complemented by gold-coloured hands. On the aluminum plate of the bezel, two different colours share borders separated at the triangular and 15-minute markers: burgundy and brown for the regular model, and blue and black with a gold fringe for the limited edition. The Luminous Light with a sepia-toned vintage effect on the hands and dot indices provides the well-worn look of a watch that has been used and loved for many years. These details, together with colour gradation dials create an eye-catching vintage look.
